Before I am an athlete, I am an Orthodox Christian. This award is certainly the most important I've ever got. As an athlete and a religious person, it is hard for me to find appropriate words to describe my feelings of gratitude for the confidence I gain from the Holy Synod. I can only say that it can be earned only with hard work and self-belief, belief in your loved ones and in God.

- Novak Djokovic, address after being bestowed with the Serbian Orthodox's highest honour, the St. Sava award, 2011

After his record tying grand slam win at the Australian Open in January, the world renowned tennis star shows no signs of slowing down in his climb to the heights as the sport's finest player ever. As extraordinary as his accomplishments are on the court, his lived Christian faith is equally compelling. Novak and his wife Jelena have financed the rebuilding of schools, chapels and the operation of a restaurant that provides free meals to the poor. They pray devoutly as a family. Of course, his last grand slam win was self-described as perhaps his greatest and sweetest. Novak wept profusely following his game/set/match point.

The Orthodox Church celebrated their Easter last Sunday and liturgically it is a time for relishing and rejoicing in contentment. Just as the Emmaus disciples waken from their despondency to the discovery of the Hidden Risen One whose company they share, so too may He continue to open minds and hearts to his Presence.

FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

We should put ourselves in the shoes of the disciples in today's Gospel. Downcast and confused, they're making their way down the road, unable to understand all the things that have occurred.

They know what they've seen—a prophet mighty in word and deed. They know what they were hoping for—that He would be the redeemer of Israel. But they don't know what to make of His violent death at the hands of their rulers.

They can't even recognize Jesus as He draws near to walk with them. He seems like just another foreigner visiting Jerusalem for the Passover.

Note that Jesus doesn't disclose His identity until they they describe how they found His tomb empty but "Him they did not see." That's how it is with us, too. Unless He revealed Himself, we would see only an empty tomb and a meaningless death.

How does Jesus make Himself known at Emmaus? First, He interprets "all the Scriptures" as referring to Him. In today's First Reading and Epistle, Peter also opens the Scriptures to proclaim the meaning of Christ's death according to the Father's "set plan"—foreknown before the foundation of the world.

In every Eucharist, we reenact that Easter Sunday at Emmaus. Jesus reveals Himself to us in our journey. He speaks to our hearts in the Scriptures. Then at the table of the altar, in the person of the priest, He breaks the bread.

The disciples begged Him, "Stay with us." So He does. Though He has vanished from our sight, in the Eucharist—as at Emmaus—we know Him in the breaking of the bread.
